

Sara And The Sea

©Tim Harrison and Second Avenue Songs 1999

Sara goes down to the seaside
Picks a pebble to throw in the brine
Looks to the red sky and wonders
If her heart can be true as the tide
True as the tide

Chorus:

And the sea gives up
What is in each soul
The mountains and sky do the same
And whatever we lose
As the shoreline moves
Can never be found again

A love was lost on a starry night
A love that was strong as the oak
A love that departed too early
A love that cannot now be known
Cannot now be known

Chorus

For the sea gives up
What is in each soul
The mountains and sky do the same
And whatever we lose
As the shoreline moves
Can never be found again

Red sunset at the close of day
Is as red as the reddest rose
A new day comes with the morning sun
New paths she's never known
Paths she's never known
